These are the farmer Champagnes from the people that live on the land and sweat into the earth. When you purchase Champagne from a Grower, you support the people that live with the Earth. With a Grower (look for the "RM" on the bottle), you feed farmers.

The Quality to Price Ratio is the Best for any Champagne. Many Growers are using only Premier or 1er ("B" Grade) and Grand Cru ("A" Grade) Fruit, from vineyards that they own, where a Négociant purchases mostly Village ("C" Grade), some Premier and a tiny bit of Grand Cru Fruit. For the same money or even a few dollars less you can taste the work of artisans who have captured a vinous snap shot of the vintage.

Why Dry Rosé?

A Dry Rosé is the First Flower of Spring in the World of Wine. It is the first wine to be released from the previous year's harvest. It tempts and teases us to relax in the afternoons and balmy evenings during our long, long summers.

A True Rosé is made from juice of red grapes that have only flirted with contact of the skins from whence it came. Contact with the skins gives the wine its delightful color. Dry Rosé is a way to enjoy characteristics of red wine without having to be weighted down by Wood and Tannin. It is a half step between Red and White Wine.

It is one of the most flexible warm weather wines. It can accompany everything from the classic picnic to grilled salmon or stand on its own merits on warm afternoons.

Why Else would we offer almost 20 Dry Rosés?

Think Pink. Drink Pink.

Pink. It is the NEW Pink!

Why Women Winemakers?

Women Winemakers (look for the “W” on the list) have a different touch when it comes to making wine. They understand subtlety.

There is a Woman behind many of the great wines we drink every day. Some of the wines you may already know, others may surprise you. Take for example the wines of Dalla Valle, Spottswoode, Araujo, Stag’s Leap Wine Cellars, Turley, Far Niente and Viader just to name a few. Any sound familiar?

I find that Women are not out to place an ego signature on their wines and create the biggest and most intense point scoring, fruit-bomb monster that is possible. There is generally a less intensive use of wood, and the tannins are supple and softer. Many women are more aware of the “Terroir” of the vineyard and do not abuse it in the winemaking process.

There is an understated elegance in the bottle. The wines they touch sing of their own accord.

To read about wine is to know. To taste is to understand.

Why Biodynamie/Biodynamica/Biodynamics?

A friend once told me, that if you drop a pebble in a pond the ripples reach out and touch all the way to the edge and then they return inward to the source. Everything you touch touches you. Think about what you eat and drink. It matters. It becomes a part of you.

Biodynamie, also known as Biodynamics, (look for the “B”) is a natural agricultural process that works with the rhythms of the earth. It uses small amounts of preparations, applied in sync with the natural cycles of the earth and moon, to stimulate the earth’s own energies and processes. I admit that the methodology is almost a bullet-train beyond weird, but, when you taste the results, it is undeniable. Some of the world’s greatest Domaines espouse the methods and create the most profound wines. With the number of advocates growing with every harvest, who is to say that Biodynamie is wrong?

“...to pretend that biodynamics is not effective is to be part of yesterday’s world.”
- Nicolas Joly

The Biodynamie Producers believe that all living things are linked in a sort of symbiotic synchronicity. A winemaker told me that ‘the earth gives him the grapes’. What do we in turn give to the earth?

If of further interest, www.biodynamy.com is the official website for producers following the methodology. Also, www.forkandbottle.com has the most comprehensive listing of Biodynamic and Organic producers I have been able to find to date.

For brevity, I have listed Organic, Biological and Biodynamic all under the “B” in order to point out all the producers that give special care to the vines and the wine they in turn give us.

Why Savennières?

In learning about wine, the wines of Savennières were the first whites to amaze and astound me. These are the wines that make me fall in love with white wines all over again. They brought my palate nearly full circle to where I began. I had run the path from sweet to dry, white to red and New World (California) to Old World (Europe). The wines are complex and unlike anything I had ever tasted. I never knew it could be like this. We invite you to indulge in this unique experience.

We find this wine in the Loire Valley which is famous as the Garden of France, for having the last wild river in Europe and for wine. They are primarily made from Sauvignon Blanc (Sancerre and Pouilly Fumé), Chenin Blanc (Vouvray), Cabernet Franc (Chinon) and Pinot Noir (Sancerre Rouge). If you had to choose just one grape where the Loire is an undisputed Master, it is in the varying forms of Chenin Blanc. It can be made in the range of bone dry to sweet like Sauternes.

Savennières is a wine that everyone can enjoy. This appellation produces the most interesting examples of dry fermented Chenin Blanc. I have not experienced a greater example of the heights and complexities that this grape may attain.

It is named after a town on the Northern Bank of the Loire River in the area of Anjou-Saumur. The Vineyards of Savennières are located on only four slopes with soils of Sand over Volcanic Rock that faces South-East. The greatest site for this appellation, Clos de la Coulée de Serrant, a mono-cru that is solely owned by Nicolas Joly, has been planted with Chenin Blanc since 1130 and has been recognized as one of the greatest white wines for centuries.

What I would drink if I sat in your seat and Why:

NV Roger Coulon 1er Cru Brut Tradition (Vrigny) 56.

This is a real agricultural product. Champagne from Eric Coulon, who is a farmer in the Montagne de Reims. Instead of Vegetables, he just happens to grow Pinot Noir, Meunier and Chardonnay for Champagne in one of the renowned vineyard sites (Premier Cru). His Family has been a grower-producer (he owns all of his own fruit) for 8 Generations. The wine is Generous, Seductive, Elegant and even Bold, Powerful and Hedonistic, but not flabby. It has basket loads of substance.

2007 Paolo Bea "Vigneto Pagliaro 'Santa Chiara'" (Umbria) 63.

Santa Chiara is a blend of 5 Grapes: Grechetto (of Orvieto Fame), Malvasia, Chardonnay (we all have heard of this one), Sauvignon, and Garganega (which gives us Soave). It is fermented without Temperature Control with Yeasts Naturally occurring on the grape. The Wine is like a Hippy Chick in a Blouse of Many Colors. It is a Revelation in the glass. It is kinda trippy, as it can be cloudy; the color migrates from slight Orange, Ochre to Salmon-Skin hues. This is what wine could have been like in the 15th Century. A True Expression of the vine, Soil and Year.

1996 Bodegas Campillo Rioja Reserva Especial (Rioja) 88.

"Like, OMG. Have you seen her sweater?" 13 years is considered mature if you think you are going on 30, but in Wines, much like people, some are just coming into their own and becoming Young Adults. This Rioja is completely Intact and Aging Gracefully with notes of Ripe Cassis, a Whiff of Sweet Tobacco and Leather, Dried Blackberry with Soft and Supple Tannins that are almost Sweet. The Acids (that mouthwatering quality that makes a wine Sing with Food) are as pleasantly intact as the Attitude of the Target Demographic for a Jonas Brothers Box Set. Treat yourself.

2007 Jorge Ordonez No.2 "Victoria" (Málaga, España) 13gls/51btl

One of the many brilliant wines graced by the hand of Robert Kracher, who was arguably one of the greatest dessert wine specialists in the world, made for Spanish Wine Importer Jorge Ordonez. In this region the grapes are dried (baked really) in direct sunlight which makes quick raisins and concentrates the residual sugars. The wine gives Fruit Cocktail, Mandarin Orange Rind, and Wild Meadow Flowers. It is Viscous without being syrupy sweet.

The Wine List is like a wave in the Ocean. These are the seventh waves.
